'Sound Alarm' Swedes Tell IGY-Men

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 12 (UP) — Swedish scientists today expressed surprise that sofar no "worldwide alarm" was issued to the International Geophysic Year authorities in connection with unusually strong solar activity which today played havoc with teleprinter and radiocommunications all over Sweden.

The Ionospheric Laboratory in Uppsala, north of Stockholm, early today registered the strongest ionospheric storm ever registered in Sweden and blood red Northern Lights over Northern Sweden were seen as far south as in the Stockholm archipelago.

The Swedish State Railway authorities issued a general warning to all their stations and signal posts at three o'clock this morning and guards were set out at some railway crossings. A member of the Swedish railway board Bengt Wikman today said that the disturbances in connection with the ionospheric storm were ten times as great as any ever before experienced by them.

Breakdowns

Swedish inland teleprinter and teletype communications were very bad with some complete breakdowns in traffic early today. Radio communications between Sweden and South America and the U.S. were very poor but improved later in the day. Further trouble was expected tonight.

The ionospheric disturbances today also caused a fire in the Swedish PTT's control station in Falun some 170 miles northwest of Stockholm. The fire was quickly extinguished. Four other control stations in Western Sweden also had blown fuses and short circuits due to the disturbances.

Blood-Red

The most spectacular effect of the solar activity was the Northern Light which reached its maximum around four o'clock this morning. The clear skies in Northern Sweden were lit up by a bloodred light which also made the snow look red. The phenemon was the most spectacular seen in Sweden for 13 years. Northern Lights are usually seen here as green flames shooting upwards from the horizon.

Professor Yngve Oehman of the Stockholm Observatory today said that scientists expected the disturbances during the past weekend.

"We have been studying the current large group of sunspots which now have passed the central meridian," Oehman told the United Press today. "When it was clear that there would be disturbances in connection with the sunspots we warned different research stations. The disturbances this morning may have come from solar flares noticed in Japan last Saturday but of this we cannot be sure until we get reports from Japan. It is, however, surprising that no world alarm has been sent out yet," he added.

UNSCRAMBLING INCOME TAX PROBLEMS

How We All Pay Uncle Sam's Upkeep

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Here is the second of five dispatches giving detailed explanations about filling out and filing the 1958 federal income tax forms, written especially for the United Press by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Russell C. Harrington.)

By RUSSELL C. HARRINGTON
Commissioner of Internal Revenue
(Written for United Press)

WASHINGTON (UP) — Being married may save you money on your income tax.

The government allows you and your wife or husband to file a joint return instead of two separate returns. Very often you pay less tax this way — but not always. The only sure way to tell which method costs less is to figure the tax both ways.

Even if you filed separately last year you may file jointly for your 1957 income. It's up to you. Whether you file jointly or separately you use the same forms. Generally, if a couple's combined income was less than $5,000 either Form 1040 or the short card Form 1040A may be used. If the income to be reported was $5,000 or more, Form 1040 is required.

In some situations joint filing is forbidden. These cases are relatively infrequent but should be remembered. They are: if you were divorced or legally separated on or before Dec. 31, 1957; if you are married to a non-citizen who does not live in this country; if you and your wife report your income on the basis of different tax years (for example, you report your income for a 12-month period ending June 30 and your wife uses the regular calendar year).

Even if your wife had no income at all, you may file a joint return. And if you didn't marry her until New Year's Eve — before midnight, of course — you may still file a joint return.

If your wife worked a little during the year and earned less than $600; it will probably be to your advantage to file a joint return, rather than letting her file separately. She might get a refund by filing separately in this case, but you could not file a joint return and you would lose her as an exemption. (More about exemptions in the third dispatch).

If your wife or husband died during the year and you did not remarry before the end of the year, you may file a joint return for the full year. And under certain circumstances the surviving spouse may claim the same income-splitting benefits of a joint return for the two years following.

When husband and wife file a joint return, both must sign the return and both become liable for any amount of tax owed.

In filing a joint return you add both the husband's and the wife's income (if any) and list the exemptions and deductions (standard or itemized) to which both are entitled. Special tax rates are provided for calculating the tax you owe, if you file jointly. The rates are figured as if your joint income were split in half and you each paid the tax on one half.

Keep in mind however that if you file separate returns and one of you itemizes his or her deductions the other must also itemize them.

Whether filing jointly or separately if you compute your tax and find you still owe something you must send in with the return a check or money order for the full amount due.

When you file jointly you attach both the husband's and the wife's Forms W-2 to the joint return. If you send in separate returns attach the right form to the right return.

One tax item which affects couples more often than it affects individuals is buying or selling a house.

As a general rule, if you sell your home or any other personal property, such as stocks or bonds, you must pay a tax on the profit you make. There is an exception which applies in certain cases where you sell your residence.

If you sold your home during 1957 for a higher price than you paid in buying it and making permanent improvements on it you need not pay tax on the profit if you buy another home within 12 months and pay as much or more for the new one as you got for the one you sold.

If you sold your home and built a new one — instead of buying an existing house — you have 18 months instead of 12. That is you must move in within 18 months.

If you buy or build a new house for less than you sold the old one, you must pay tax on part, or all, of the profit from selling the old. If you owned the old house for more than six months, the tax may be at lower rates.

Report all of this in detail on a separate tax form, called Schedule D, and summarize it on page 3 of Form 1040.

Later I will discuss deducting interest payments on the mortgage on your house.

FIVE COMMON MISTAKES

WASHINGTON (UP) — Here are five common mistakes that cause people to pay more income tax than they should:

Claiming the standard 10 per cent deduction for allowable deductions (such as interest, contributions, taxes) when an itemized list would add up to more than 10 per cent of income.

Failure to claim all allowable deductions when making the itemized list, such as the cost of auto license plates.

Husbands and wives often file separate returns when a joint return would reduce their tax.

Failure to claim all permissible dependents, especially children under 19 or in school (though they may have earned more than $600 of their own) and relatives you may be supporting jointly with others.

Not deducting pay received under an employer-financed plan while you were absent from work because of injury or illness.

American Export Lines Plan To Increase Ships And Services

(Special to the Daily American)

American Export Lines has started its fleet replacement program by signing contracts with Federal Maritime Board and shipbuilders to construct four new type C3-S-38A, 18-1 2-knot freighters, Fraser A. Bailey, managing director, announced.

Two of the 10,210 deadweight ton ships will be built by National Steel and Shipbuilding Corporation, San Diego, California, on a fixed price basis of $11,754,501 each. Two identical ships will be built by New York Shipbuilding Corporation, Camden, New Jersey, on an escalated price basis of $11,420,983 each. It is estimated this contract will assure a total of 3,200 man years of labor in the two shipbuilding centers.

P.L. 805 Program

These are the first construction contracts to be awarded by the government to a West Coast shipyard under Public Law 805 in support of the desire of the Congress and President to keep essential shipyards "at ready" in the interest of national defense. These will be the first ships constructed on the Pacific Coast for Export.

Due for delivery in 1960, these large, fast ships will replace four freighters that were constructed in the late 1930s and early 1940s, following passage of the 1936 Merchant Marine Act as amended. The latter vessels proved their value as wartime auxiliaries and also in building peacetime commerce between the United States and all countries bordering the Mediterranean, Red Sea and Indian Ocean.

The new ships will have the following principal characteristics: overall length 492 ft. 6 in.; beam molded 73 ft. They will displace 16,810 tons at 27 ft. draft. Steam turbines will deliver 12,500 normal shaft horsepower to a single screw The cruising radius is 14,600 miles.

Six cargo holds will have bale capacity of 551,960 cu. ft. and also 29,900 cu ft. of refrigerated space; 48,635 cu ft. of liquid cargo capacity and 13,000 cu. ft. of space in strong rooms and special cargo rooms. They meet all Navy, National Defense and Coast Guard requirements and will operate with crews of 54 men.

To Improve Services

These new ships will enable the company to make important additional improvements in its present shipping service between the United States North Atlantic Coast and principal ports of Italy, France, Spain, Greece, Turkey and other Mediterranean, North African and Eastern Mediterranean ports.

American Export Lines, established in 1919, now owns and operates thirty (30) vessels including the 1,000 passenger luxury liners Independence and Constitution that rank as third and fourth fastest and largest under the United States flag. The Independence and Constitution operate regular express service and cruises between New York, Spain, France and Italy. There are also 28 combination vessels and freighters serving principal ports of all countries bordering the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, India, Pakistan, Ceylon and Burma.
