LEND ME YOUR EARS:

A Noted Author Returns To His Appian Villa

BACK IN THEIR BEAUTIFUL Appian Way villa after two years absence from the Roman scene are noted author-newspaperman James Wellard, his wife Mary and the two children—John, 9, and Lula, 7.

For the past year Wellard has been teaching English literature in a private girls' college in Virginia, but "I continue to write novels and stuff," he says. One of his novels, "Action of the Tiger," was recently filmed by MGM, with Van Johnson and Martine Carol. Shot off the coast of Spain, the movie contains one scene that was made in two versions. This is the episode when Miss Carol swims from a yacht—American audiences will see her clad in a little black costume; continental audiences will see her in the other.

"A good part of the picture I don't recognize as my own," comments Wellard ruefully. "But that's usual."

After a stay in Rome, the Wellards will move on to London, where he will work on a film treatment of another of his novels, "Deep Is the Night," which concerns the North African Berber tribe of Ouled Nail and a young American idealist who gets caught up in it. It will be made as an art film, rather than a commercial one, by a French firm.

"The movies are growing up," says Wellard, who is British-born and a naturalized American. "After all, they're 40 years out of their teething stage. In America no one goes to the movies unless it's an adult film. You can see all the tripe on TV. The future for films, I believe, is to move into the area of the theater, to play for the intelligent, sophisticated audiences the theater now caters to."

Art Notes

Three out-of-the-ordinary exhibits are currently on view in Rome—prints of old Boston and Paul Revere silver at the Palazzo Braschi, honoring the Salute to Boston visitors; ancient mural paintings of India and Ceylon, as copied by Sarkis Katchadourian, at the Palazzo Brancaccio, shown under the auspices of the Italian Institute for the Middle and Far East and the Italo-Indian Association; and the works of young artist-fellows of the Egyptian Academy at Villa Colle Oppio... Odyssea Skouras' delightful gallery on Via Liguria (the only one in Rome with a tree growing in it) has inaugurated a new show of designs by Renato Guttuso... the Selecta Gallery holds a vernissage this evening at 6 of paintings by Sandro Somaré... prizes have been awarded for the Via Frattina's recent street-long painting exhibit. First prize of 250,000 lire goes to Franco Villorini, second prizes to the Spanish painter Beulac and the Italian Tommasi, and a special prize from the EPT for a picture representing the folkways of the Roman province to Mario Teppi of Anticoli Corrado.

Veneto Varia

Public relations veteran Jim Nolan dropped by Rome after the Monza '500' to apologize for Raymond C. Firestone's inability to visit Rome. The Firestone president, intensely interested in the Monza race, had planned to stop here on his way home, but the pressure of business caught up with him in the north and washed out the Roman holiday... ex-King Farouk is in high good humor these days. He was telling a group of friends at the new Madison House about the deluge of mail he has received congratulating him on winning his suit against Elsa Maxwell. He also has suits pending in London, Brussels, and Milan. The former monarch is also proud of the accomplishment of his teenage daughter. The headmaster of the exclusive Swiss school she attends advised her last week not to take her exams, as he felt she was not fully prepared for them. Farouk in a phone call advised her to try anyway, explaining that it is no disgrace to fail. She did... and passed the exams with honors... baritone of the Met Leo-Adrian yesterday with Mrs. Warren and is at the Ambasciatori.

Mike Todd To Throw Fun Fair Party For London Premiere

LONDON, July 2 (UP)—Hollywood producer Mike Todd throws a party here tonight.

Todd's "intimate" party to celebrate the London premiere of his extravaganza, "Around the World in 80 Days," will end up with something close to 2,000 persons if police can keep out the gatecrashers.

The flamboyant mogul has rented the whole of the Battersea Festival Gardens and Fun Fair, London's Coney Island-on-the-Thames, for his midnight-to-dawn celebration.

It will make his recent Cannes Film Festival festa with lions on the lawn look like an English drawing room on a Sunday afternoon. Tonight's premiere, with the best seats going for 100 guineas ($300) in aid of the Newspaper Press Fund, was sold out weeks ago.

Red double-decker London buses designated for such destinations as "Hong Kong," "Yokohama" and "New York" will take Todd's evening-dressed guests from the premiere to Charing Cross pier below the Houses of Parliament. From there six big London sightseeing boats manned by brass bands, jazz bands and rag-tag street musicians will carry them up the Thames to the landing stage of Battersea Park.

Thousands of newly minted "coins" will be offered guests by responsibilities accorded them by the Constitution, are aware of the perfect constitutional legality of the proceedings which led to the formation of the Government and to its subsequent appearance before Parliament, after the nonacceptance of its resignation.

"The Government emphasizes that it has never in any way found itself in conflict with other authorities of the State."

"In the second part of his intervention, Senator Sturzo referred to rumors in circulation and to news of which he himself expressed doubt, considering these to be the products of exaggeration and generalization."

"The government considers that it can affirm with full knowledge of the facts that, within the sphere of its competence, there have never been cases of interference by other authorities, and that in the public administration there has been rigorous respect for the spheres of competence, the attributions and the responsibilities of officials in their actions and in their hierarchical relations."

"The President of the Republic is regularly informed of all the affairs of state in the manner laid down by the Constitution and by the laws."

"The statement of the Prime Minister (at the Cabinet meeting) was unanimously approved."

Present—For You and Yours . . . Radiations again favorable, so budget your time to get maximum benefits. Good day for collecting debts, attending to correspondence and doing research. Activity around water, both business and pleasure, is excellently aspected. Affairs of the heart will demand attention in p.m. An element of surprise is strong in most charts.

Past . . . William Makepeace Thackeray, English writer of novels picturing middle-class Victorian life, was born July 18, 1811. He is best remembered for strong character portrayal, such as Becky Sharp, in "Vanity Fair."

The Day Under Your Sign

ARIES (Born March 21 to April 20) . . . Most on "demerol" in family activities. Children bring much happiness.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 20) . . . You'll get a kick out of a sports event either as a spectator or as a participant.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) . . . Romance must be secondary to business for you to come out on credit side of the ledger.

CANCER (June 22 to July 22) . . . People will request information and advice. You are well qualified to give both.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) . . . Garden work favorably aspected. You'll derive pleasure from seeing the results.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) . . . Even though someone is trying to discourage you, have confidence in yourself. You'll succeed.

NY Private Eye Takes Blame For That MM-istake

HOLLYWOOD, July 17 (UP)—Private detective Barney Ruditsky yesterday belatedly came to the defense of retired baseball star Joe DiMaggio and crooner Frank Sinatra by taking full responsibility for the Marilyn Monroe "wrong door" raid.

Former N.Y. Cop . . . Ruditsky, former New York City police officer, appeared before the county grand jury to give his version of the raid in which private detectives employed by DiMaggio broke into the wrong apartment on Nov. 5, 1954, in the belief that they would find Miss Monroe, former wife of the baseball player.

The detective had been scheduled to testify before the grand jury last March when it was investigating the raid, but a heart condition prevented him from appearing.

Ruditsky said he and investigator Phillip Irwin broke into the apartment while Sinatra remained in a car parked a block away. The detective said DiMaggio entered the building but did not go into the apartment of Mrs. Florence Kotz Ross, 39, which the investigators entered by mistake.

Quiz Climax . . . The raid was the climax to an investigation which DiMaggio started when he and Miss Monroe became estranged, but it took place about a week after their divorce.

"Joe and I were old friends in New York and he was madly in love with his wife and hoped for a reconciliation," Ruditsky explained.

'Keep Out, Frank' . . . Ruditsky said he warned Sinatra who accompanied the raiders not to enter the apartment, telling him: "Frank, I don't want you to get into this."

At the March hearing Sinatra denied taking part in the actual raid but Irwin testified the crooner was among the party entering Mrs. Ross' apartment.

Mrs. Ross has filed a $200,000 damage suit against DiMaggio and Sinatra. Ruditsky and Irwin are among the defendants.
