LEND ME YOUR EARS:

'Humor In Music' Will Be Sir Ashley's Topic

ONE OF THE DISTINGUISHED MUSICOLOGISTS in Rome is a diplomat — Sir Ashley Clarke, British ambassador to the Quirinal. Sir Ashley has given delightful lectures on music before, both at the British Council and the Sala Accademia in Via dei Greci, and his subjects have ranged from "Nationalism in Music" to Sir Edward Elgar's "Dream of Gerontius."

On Thursday afternoon at 5:30 Sir Ashley will lecture again. His topic will be "Humor in Music," and the talk will be delivered in Italian at the Sala Accademia. Sir Ashley will provide his own illustrations at the piano, and there will be tape recordings as well.

Rome Miscellany

Vasco Pereira da Cunha, the new Portuguese ambassador to the Holy See, is due to arrive in Rome by plane today to take up his post. Da Cunha, former secretary general of Portugal's Foreign Ministry, replaces Francisco de Calheiros e Meneses, who served as ambassador from 1954 until early this year. . . . Jorge Antonio, the fabulous Argentine financier and close friend of ex-President Juan Peron, flew into Rome from Madrid Sunday, accompanied by Dr. Alberto Seru Garcia. He says he'll be here for a few days strictly on "a business visit." Speculation was rife yesterday that he might be laying plans for an Italian exile for his onetime boss. . . . the Rev. Roland Brown, former pastor of Parkside Baptist Church, Chicago, delivered the sermon Sunday at St. Paul's American Church and Paul Burke-Mahony, headmaster of Paroli Day School, conducted the service in the absence of Dr. George A. Trowbridge, whose physician has ordered a week's rest. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are on a global missionary journey that will take in some 30-odd countries. . . . Salerno-born writer-poet-novelist Alfonso Gatto will speak on "A Poet in His Time" at the Teatro Eliseo this afternoon at 6 as part of the "Literary Tuesdays" series. . . . American tenor Herbert Handt, Bruno Rizzoli and Ivan Sardi will be the soloists at tomorrow afternoon's presentation of Haydn's "The Seasons" at Teatro Argentina, with Rudolf Moralt conducting. . . . Mrs. Vivian Fawcett, wife of the publisher of Fawcett Publications, is a guest at the Excelsior, where her husband expects to join her today. . . . here's the final line-up of officers newly elected at the Foreign Press Club in Rome: Max Bergere, president; Walter Guzzardi, vice president; Mrs. Burton Wohl, second vice president; Kurt Klinger, secretary; and Julio Moriones, treasurer. Henry Thody was named Chairman of the Bar Committee and Fritz Lampe Chairman of the House Committee. Other Members of the Council are Bill Pepper and Stephen House. Stampa Estera member, Bob Hawkins, was named Librarian. . . . America is viewed through Italian eyes in the new exhibit of sketches and gouaches by Tamburi at Il Segno Gallery on Via Capo le Case. Cities depicted include New York, Chicago, Providence, Harrisburg, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The Weekend Roundup

Raven-haired movie star Elsa Martinelli, wife of Count Franco Mancinelli Scotti, gave birth early Sunday morning to a daughter at the couple's Via Appia Antica villa. Although the baby was prematurely born and weighed only six pounds, ten ounces, both mother and child were reported yesterday to be doing well. British actress Belinda Lee slipped out of Rome Sunday night by plane for South Africa to resume film work there. She was driven straight to a BOAC plane at Ciampino airport and hustled aboard unnoticed while passengers who flew in to Rome were disembarking. Thus she avoided newsmen anxious to talk to Miss Lee about the sensational publicity linking her with Prince Filippo Orsini, who has just recovered from what police termed an "attempted suicide." It was not explained how she avoided the regular customs check which requires other passengers to check in at the air terminal.

Early Flicks

Those of you who are enthusiastic about old motion pictures — whether for nostalgia's sake or a technical interest in the medium — will be glad to know that the Film Club Roma will resume its activities this week, with a series of 12 Friday night programs at the Teatro Planetario (near the Grand Hotel).

This Friday's film, the first of four early German talkies, will be Fritz Lang's powerful "M," of 1930, with Peter Lorre as a psychopathic killer. After that will come G. W. Pabst's "Niemandsland," and, on Feb. 28, Josef von Sternberg's "The Blue Angel," in which Marlene Dietrich's legs were first revealed to a gawping world.

Other pictures on the schedule include five from the "Golden Age of Soviet Cinema": Greta Garbo's early Swedish-made triumph "Gösta Berling's Saga," made by Max Stiller; "The Son of the Sheik," with Rudolph Valentino; and "The Navigator," with Buster Keaton.

Subscriptions can be obtained either at 18 Via Viterbo (Piazza Fiume) or at the Anglo-American Book Shop, 57 Via della Vite.

The bride was given away by her brother, Vernon Cansino. She wore a Turkish brown gown of crepe and satin with shoes, bag and a small, off-the-face hat to match.

Hill, a partner in Hecht-Hill-Lancaster productions, said he and his bride plan a European honeymoon when Miss Hayworth finishes her current picture for the firm.

Hill's best man was his brother, David. The guest list also included his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hill Sr., of Los Angeles, and Miss Hayworth's daughters, Rebecca, 13, and Yasmin, 9.
