Lester Welch, production manager for the Mario Lanza film, became so enthusiastic loading company personnel into cars for Cinecittà that he berded an innocent cameo dealer into one of the limousines. Here & There

England's most distinguished historian, George Macaulay Trevelyan, was honored at a solemn ceremony in the Aula Magna of the University of Turin Tuesday, when in the presence of the academic, Turinese authorities and British Ambassador Sir Ashley Clarke the university awarded him the "ad honorem" degree in letters. The 81-year-old scholar is noted for his studies in Italian history, particularly in the field of the Risorgimento... and in Florence a notable event was yesterday's marriage of Maria Antinori, daughter of Marchese Nicolo Antinori, to Ginolo Ginori Conti... today's important vernissage in Rome is that of paintings by Venetian artist Giorgio Valenzin, at Stefanello Barberini Colonna di Sciarra's Sagittarius Gallery on Via Lazio... Giuliano Gerbi, permanent correspondent of radio station WOV in New York, sailed on the Giulio Cesare for a short vacation in the States, accompanied by his 7-year-old daughter Vivian Margaret. He'll be back by the end of July. TWA's "Jetstream" whisked Italian film director Federico Fellini to the U.S. yesterday. In Hollywood he'll receive the Screen Directors Guild award for his production of "La Strada"... two other TWA passengers were film actor Edmond Purdom, arriving in Rome from Madrid, and Len Allen of NBC-TV, arriving ditto from Paris.

Vittorio Barattieri Quits Loyola Academy

CHICAGO, June 5 (AP)—Vittorio Barattieri, 14, who skipped school for six weeks to see the New York sights, withdrew voluntarily from Loyola Academy where he was a sophomore. The decision was reached at a conference between the boy, his father, Count Ludovico Barattieri, Italian consul general in Chicago, and the Reverend Eugene Mangold, S.J., acting principal of the academy. Neither Vittorio nor his father said where the boy would attend school in the autumn.
