Lend me your Ears

By RACHAEL BAUMEL

"IF SOME OF THESE AMERICAN university coaches could get some of these Roman cab drivers in their backfields, the drivers instinctively could go through the slightest little hole in the line," declares J. F. Koons, vice president of the Cincinnati Auto Club and a member of the national board of directors of the American Automobile Association.

"These cab drivers almost instinctively sense the opportunity to get through and they go. Our driver this morning actually maneuvered—almost feinted, with what he was going to do," Koons added in somewhat awed tones, concluding "They're fantastic drivers. No doubt about it. They seem to drive as much by instinct as by rule."

Koons, whose last visit to Rome was in 1937, when there was considerably less traffic than there is now, was questioned about what he thought would happen if an Italian driver went to Cincinnati and charged through traffic as he does here. "Our police department would go crazy," he said. "There'd almost be an alarm out," and he continued, "if a New York taxi driver came to Rome I think he'd be afraid to drive." On the other hand, Koons pointed out, "I think Americans — with their heavier cars — would scare the life out of the Italians — in their lighter cars — on our highways," since he pointed out that it's not too unusual to see Stateside drivers clipping along at 90 miles an hour.

Re the traffic — and traffic accident situation in the States, Koons reminded us that bills are currently being introduced for psychological examinations for drivers before issuing licenses. So far none has become law, but he expects that it won't be too long.

Actually Koons' AAA activities are extra-curricular, a former newsman (with AP) he's really in the advertising business (being president of Midland Advertising) and is also vice president of The Burger Brewing Co. In addition to his autoing interest, Koons has the unique distinction of being a member of the Society of American Legion Founders.

He and his wife, Ethel, who says "we're scared to death when we cross the street here," are just here vacationing, plan to stay at the Excelsior till Tuesday before heading off to Athens, Istanbul, Vienna, Munich, Berlin, and Paris. While here they had an audience with Pope Pius XII, arranged by an old friend, Msgr. Edward A. Quinn of Cincinnati.

VIA VENETOPICS: Beatrice Cenci, the Italian noblewoman who with other members of her family and a friend murdered her tyrannical father and was hanged for it, will be brought to the screen by an actress who's pretty far from a Roman—Joan Greenwood. John Mather, who arranged for her to play the role, tells us that Miss G is slated to arrive in Rome around the middle of the month and they'll probably start shooting the picture toward the end of March. It's being made by Electra Films, directed by Riccardo Freda with Gino Cervi and French actress Micheline Presle slated to be in the film. Also in addition to all the movies she's made, Miss G appeared on Broadway in T. S. Eliot's "The Confidential Clerk" . . . famed mobile sculptor Alexander Calder, who was slated to arrive in Rome about two weeks ago, was definitely expected to appear yesterday. He's traveling by car and was held up by the snow. His works will be on exhibit at the Obelisco beginning the 14th . . . note to Roman wolves: Nantas Salvalaggio, writing in this week's Epoca, reports that Marilyn Monroe will be visiting Rome, Florence and Venice when she winds up the movie that she'll be doing with Laurence Olivier in London — "The Sleeping Prince" . . . the joint was really shaking—cocktail shaking, that is, at the Kit Kat the other night. Occasion was the weekly celebs cocktail mixing contest for which a silver shaker is awarded. Mixing the concoctions for the judges, who included film folk, press people and Roman painter Novella Parigini, were actresses Marisa Allasio (who with gay abandon combined Canadian whiskey, gin, lemon and sugar), Andreina Paul (whose combination of gin, vermouth, and Campari actually wound up being a Negroni) and Nadia Marlowa. (She combined gin, vermouth, vodka and Strega). The winner? Marisa. Silvio Noto was MC. The silver shaker contest goes on Thursday evening till the 29th, when they'll award a gold shaker pin . . . "La Padrona di Raggio di Luna" with Robert Alda, Ernesto Calindri, Lauretta Masiero and Maria Pia Casilio, which opened at the Eliseo the other night, was a big success, according to Messaggero . . . Mike Stern back from London, where he was working on the TV series which features many of his exclusive stories. It's called "The City."

CULTURAMA: Works of Venetian painter Teo Gianniotti will be shown at La Medusa gallery beginning at 6 this evening. Works of the painter, who died in 1952, are in many private and public collections here, as well as collections in other European countries and in the United States . . . 30 works of Primo Conti done between 1911 and 1924 are currently on view at Il Camino gallery . . . Manlio Giarrizzo's paintings being shown at Alibert gallery. Giarrizzo is currently professor of painting at the Accademia di Belle Arti di Brera in Milan . . . paintings of American artist Oronzo Gasparro, who was born in Rutigliano near Bari, will go on view today at the New Pickwick Club in the British School in Bari. Gasparro, who is currently visiting Italy, has just spent a month in Taormina painting, and after his show, which closes the 14th, he plans to visit Rome . . . violinist Johanna Martzy will present a program of music by Beethoven, Bach and Schubert this afternoon at 5:30 at the University of Rome's Aula Magna. Jean Antonietti will be at the piano.

AROUND TOWN: The weather outside was drab and gloomy during Sunday's birthday and the coronation ceremonies in honor of the side St. Peter's it was as bright as an Italian day should be, as diplomatic representatives from all over the world, Italian nobility, churchmen and the little people all joined together to honor the Pontiff in a colorful and impressive ceremony . . . several interesting churches around town being restored—among them San Sebastiano outside the walls on Via Appia and Santa Maria del Popolo, and there has been restoration work done on Santa Maria in Trastevere that allows plenty of light for seeing the famed work of Domenichino in the Winter Choir Chapel.

VIA VENETOPICS: Elsa Martinelli off to New York and Hollywood the middle of the week. She's slated to start her second movie with Kirk Douglas in about a week. The first was "The Indian Fighter" . . . John McCone, President Eisenhower's personal representative to the Pope's coronation ceremonies, and Mrs McCone PAA to Paris tomorrow . . . when Sophia Loren makes her next movie, "Elephant Bill" in Indochina, she'll know how to drape a mean sari. Mrs Gladys Williams, wife of FAO's K. Williams, has showed La Loren how to fit a sari around her curves, and reports the film star was fascinated by the costume . . . our fervent hope for the day — "If winter comes — can Spring be far behind?" . . . hats off to the Roman cats, whom we have long suspected are the world's hardiest tabbies. Spotted a beautiful black feline sunning itself happily yesterday morning — on the white snow of a garage roof . . . and we hope that the weather will be beter by the end of the month or one young Swedish lady is going to be sadly disillusioned. Seems that Swedes, polled by a popular Swedish radio program, voted for Italy as their favorite vacation country. (Their own homeland was second and the U.S. third.) So the program selected Elsa Hansson, 30, and invited her to spend Easter in sunny Italy as the radio show's guest. Elsa, who has never been to Italy before heads South the 29th for two weeks . . . a Red Cross truck, parked on Via Veneto yesterday morning, brought from Bruce Cabot the wry comment: "Must be bringing relief to the storm victims in Doney's."

BISSOLATI BRIEFS: Famed maestro Otto Klemperer slated to conduct the Santa Cecilia Orchestra in Beethoven's Sixth and Seventh symphonies at Teatro Argentina tomorrow evening at 6:30 (which is an hour later than the usual afternoon concert time) . . . director Jean Negulesco of "Three Coins in the Fountain" fame expected here the end of the month . . . Jean Greenwood was slated to get into town yesterday. As noted earlier she's playing the title role in the movie "Beatrice Cenci" . . . Lulo Pietrangeli, operator of the Galleon nitery and the California restaurant, has been borrowing from Peter to pay Paul since he knocked the Galleon martinis down to 150 lire. The call for martinis at the Galleon the other night was so great he had to send a boy hurrying over to the California to borrow some glasses . . . five of the titled ladies who went to New York to promote Italian fashions are back in town . . . Fulbright musicologist Ned Hanley has moved to Rome . . . Albert Higley (president of the Higley Co.) and Mrs Higley and Birkett Williams (president of the Birkett Williams Co.) and Mrs W, all of Cleveland, PAAed in yesterday afternoon. They're at the Grand . . . Fulbright pianist Norma Spangler in Rome for a day or so. She's studying in Florence . . . currently underway at La Margutttiana gallery, a show of works by Maria Teresa Fasciani.

ELSA MARTINELLI
. . . off to Hollywood

HERE & THERE: Italian actress Lucia Bosè expecting to leave for Mexico any day now to join her husband Spanish matador Luis Miguel Dominguin, who is currently fighting there. She's already had to delay her departure twice because her Mexican entry visa was late in arriving. The bullfighter and his lady are expecting their first baby sometime this month . . . among folks sailing yesterday on Independence from Naples: J. E. Slater, president of American Export Lines, and Mrs Slater; Paul Huffard, vice president of Union Carbide and Carbon Corp., and Mrs Huffard, Marvin L. Levy, sales manager, Lehman Bros., and Mrs Levy, Dr. Hannibal Vitimariani, chamberlain "Cape and Sword" for Pope Pius XII, the U.S. Consulate's Leonard Caswell and wife, and the embassy's Howard Show and family. Getting on in Genoa today—a guy who should know every wave in the ocean—William Kuhnle. This gentleman is making his 514th crossing of the Atlantic! With him —Mrs Kuhnle. Maybe there's even a mermaid or two, also . . . SETAF's musicians, vocalists and entertainers from Leghorn and Vicenza-Verona will be competing April 20th in an entertainment contest at Camp Darby's Riviera Service Club. But before the big talent night, there will be "qualifying contests" sponsored by installation commanders—to be completed by April 7th. There'll be two classifications of entrants "live" and "recorded"—the "live" section to consist of vocal and instrumental soloists, individual novelty performances, and vocal, instrumental and specialty groups. In the recorded category there'll be barber shop quarters, army band or post choruses, country and Western music, singing platoon and battalion or regimental choruses.

Mrs Luce Ill, Confined To Bed

NEW YORK, March 12 (AP) — Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce, 52, was put to bed Saturday with a combined case of influenza and laryngitis that forced her to abandon plans for entertaining Italy's visiting President Giovanni Gronchi.

"She'll probably be laid up for around four or five days, possibly longer," her physician, Dr. Milton Rosenbluth, said.

Mrs Luce flew here from San Francisco Friday night, feeling ill. Her condition later became more severe. An associate said her laryngitis was so bad she couldn't speak. "She's rather miserable, but it's nothing to worry about," Rosenbluth said. "I'm confident she'll be all right soon."

TV $100,000 Won By Rear Admiral

NEW YORK, March 12 (AP) — Rear Adm. Redfield Mason won $100,000 on a television show tonight by naming correctly the six trios of women in mythology.

He is the third person to win the top prize on the show "The Big Surprise."

Redfield, who commands the military sea transportation service in the Atlantic, appeared calm throughout the quiz program and answered the questions without seeming difficulty.

Cooking Couple Wins Million Lire On N.Y. TV Show

NEW YORK, March 12 (AP) — Mr and Mrs Tino Musumeci yesterday became the second couple to win the top prize on the Italian-American television quiz show, "Win a Million Lire," (Un Milione Se Lo sai).

They won the million on a two part question on the subject of the history of cooking.

The Musumecis said they intend to give the million lire to their daughter, who is to be married shortly, so she and her husband may honeymoon in Italy.

The final question was a two part one.

The first part asked the couple to name three principal foods, found in the Bibie, which, except for modern means of cooking, are the same today.

Tino named them as bread, olive oil and wine.

The second part was subdivided into three sections.

It referred to the time when a famous English lady, aided by an admiral, helped restore the King of Naples to his throne, and the dessert invented by the king's chef in the lady's honor.

The Musumeci's were asked to name the lady, the admiral and the seven ingredients of the dessert—zuppa inzlese (rum cake).

They succeeded — naming Lady Hamilton, Admiral Nelson and — with Mrs Musumeci dancing up and down in excitement—Tino ticked off the seven ingredients.

Sainthood Candidate

HONOLULU, March 12 (AP)—The Roman Catholic church has opened a study that may lead to sainthood for Father Damien de Veuster, the famed Belgian priest who worked and died at the Molokai Island leper colony.
