LEND ME YOUR EARS:

Film Actress To Marry Into House Of Savoy

ONE OF ITALY'S MOST ATTRACTIVE FILM ACTRESSES, Marisa Allasio, is to marry a nephew of former King Umberto of Italy — 27-year-old Count Pier Francesco Calvi di Bergolo. The banns were published Monday in the town hall of Casale Monferrato, near Turin.

The blonde and shapely Miss Allasio, whom you saw in "Poveri ma Belli" and the Mario Lanza film "The Seven Hills of Rome," met the count at the Venice Film Festival last year, and they have been seen together frequently since then. She is the daughter of a former Italian soccer ace, Mario Allasio, who now coaches a professional team.

No date for a wedding has been picked yet, but under Italian law banns are publicly exhibited at least 15 days before a marriage takes place.

The count is the son of Princess Yolanda of Savoy, sister of the former Italian monarch, who is now in exile in Portugal.

Happy Birthday . . .

...today to West Kurt Klinger, wife of the Mst German news agency man . . . and to newsman George Armstrong.

Ins And Outs

Rome Miscellany

A three-day conference on the art of Italy's great actress Eleonora Duse, under the high patronage of President Giovanni Gronchi, will open today at the Centro Sperimentale di Cinematografia. Some of the most notable figures of the Italian literary and theatrical worlds are associated with the conference; representatives from other countries include Dame Edith Evans of Great Britain, Frank Ferguson of the U.S., Mme. Simone and Nina Gouriinkel of France and Herbert Frenzel of Germany. The organizing committee of the Duse congress is composed of Alfonso D'Alessandro, Sandro D'Amico, Anne D'Arbeloff and Gerardo Guerrieri, Leonardo Fioravanti, Michele Lacalamita and Raul Radice. . . .

In addition to today's openings at the Odyssea and Schneider galleries (see illustrations on this page), there'll be two others. G. U. Bertorotta's L'incontro Gallery on Via Angelo Brunetti opens a one-man show of the Pugliese artist Salvatore Salve mini this evening, and the Alberti Gallery on Via Margutta puts on an exhibit of paintings by Francesco Tabusso. And tomorrow 20-year-old artist Gaia Servadio of Padua will show her most recent works at the San Sebastiano Gallery. . . . all members of the British Commonwealth community are invited to attend a short service at the Rome War Cemetery, Via Nicolò Zabaglia (near Porta San Paolo), at 10 a.m. on Sunday—Remembrance Sunday. Services at All Saints Church on Via del Babuino and St. Andrew's on Via XX Settembre will follow the cemetery ceremony.

If you have any news for "Lead Me Your Ears," please telephone Rome: 587.115 between 1 and 5 p.m. or write to 9 Via Dandolo, Rome, Italy.

Dante Edition Sold

LONDON, Nov. 4 (AP)—A first illustrated edition of Dante's masterpiece, "La Divina Commedia," published in Florence in 1481, was sold at auction at Sotheby's today for 4,200 pounds ($11,700).

ROME GALLERY OPENINGS—Both the Schneider and the Odyssea galleries will inaugurate new art shows today. At the former there will be an exhibit of paintings, drawings and lithographs by the young Naples-born artist Sinisca (shown above with several of his works), together with sculpture by Carlo Canestrari. The Odyssea Gallery is presenting the first one-man show of sculptor Luciano Minguzzi, whose bronze work, entitled "The Lovers," is shown at right.

Swedish Queen Goes Shopping, King Views Art In London

LONDON, Nov. 4 (AP)—Sweden's King Gustav Adolf, it seems, shares the view of most men: "Shopping is strictly for women." If his wife, Queen Louise, is out shopping in London again today you can bet the King prefers to find a convenient art gallery.

It happened again yesterday. The Queen went shopping. The King went to an art exhibition. The Swedish royal couple are enjoying their London holiday without fuss or formality.

Queen Louise is here for a five-week private visit. King Gustav joined her last Saturday. They are staying at the Hyde Park Hotel in fashionable Knightsbridge ("192 bedrooms, terms on application," says the guide book).

Their suite overlooks a busy main road and the park.

King Gustav and his wife celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary yesterday with a quiet dinner party. They kept it so quiet that not even the embassy knew it was their anniversary until a newsman telephoned to check.

During the day, Queen Louise went shopping in the smart stores near the hotel. She crossed the road with her lady-in-waiting by using a public underpass. They were jostled by crowds as they emerged on the sidewalk.

Goes Unrecognized

King Gustav dropped in on the Victoria and Albert Museum while his wife was shopping yesterday. He strolled unrecognized around an exhibition of Byzantine art.

The director of the museum was quite unaware that they had a royal visitor yesterday.

"Good heavens," said a fellow official today, "I must tell him."

40 Americans To Be Ordained Here

By JOHN KRUEGER (Staff Writer)

Forty students at the North American College will be ordained as priests Saturday. The Most Rev. Martin J. O'Connor, Rector of the college and Titular Bishop of Thespieae, will be the ordaining prelate. He will be assisted by Msgr. William A. Bachmann and Msgr. Loras J. Waters, spiritual directors at the college.

Some 150 parents, relatives and friends have arrived from the United States to attend the ceremony which will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday in the chapel of the college located in the Janiculum Hill.

Separate Rite
One of the students, Vincent E. Daly, of Belmont, Mass., will be ordained by Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston, in a separate rite Saturday at the Church of Santa Susanna, the Cardinal's titular church.

Twenty-two states and the District of Columbia and 30 archdioceses and dioceses are represented in the class. The new priests will complete their theological studies in June.

NATO Votes Missile Beef Up

The Soviet bloc has more than 6,000,000 men under arms in Europe. They include 4,500,000 men in ground forces, of whom some 3,000,000 are Russians, the Western military chiefs reported.

The report on Soviet armed might was delivered by Adm. Sir Michael M. Denny, British representative on the NATO Standing Group and on the NATO Permanent Military Committee.

At the same time the council heard reports on NATO's own military build-up from Adm. Jerard Wright, supreme allied commander, Atlantic, and Allied Commander-in-Chief Gen. Lauris M. Norstad.

Details Secret
Details of the reports were kept secret. But NATO sources said the Review of Soviet bloc Strength included these figures:

• Soviet bloc military forces in Europe total more than 6,000,000 men.

• Russia still has a spearhead of 25 division in East Germany poised at any time to attack Western Europe.

• The Red Air Force totals 20,000 operational planes and totals 800,000 men. The satellites have another 2,500 planes.

• The Soviet Navy, second largest in the world today, will include some 700 submarines by 1960.

Norstad and Wright reported that NATO is just getting underway with its long-term plan for what is described as "phasing-in" the most modern weapons as they are added to its armory.

But the program still is in its infancy and the NATO official spokesman said it is too early to express "optimism" or "pessimism" over progress in this field.

However, the spokesman quoted U.S. Defense Secretary Neil J. McElroy as saying "NATO's achievements in the last ten years give hope for the future and for further progress."

The reports by the military experts were followed by a short general debate in which speakers included the U.S., British, Canadian, Netherlands and Norwegian defense ministers and the Turkish Foreign Minister.
