NATO To Celebrate Anniversary In Naples

(Special to the Daily American)

HQS. ALLIED FORCES SOUTHERN EUROPE, NAPLES, June 10 — Thirteen military bands from six NATO countries will parade in Naples next Saturday, opening the tenth anniversary celebration of Allied Forces Southern Europe, NATO's Southern command. The 700 bandsmen — from Italy, France, Greece, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the United States — will also provide the martial music for the massive military review along Via Caracciolo scheduled for Sunday morning. In addition, they will present a band concert followed by mass retreat ceremony at the Albricci Military Stadium on Via Arenaccia on Sunday afternoon.

The parade of military bands on Saturday will start at 6:30 p.m. from Piazza Dante, proceeding down Via Roma and ending at Piazza Plebiscito.

Traditional Melodies

Turkey's Mehter Band from Istanbul, dressed in centuries-old costumes, will play traditional melodies, which will be in sharp contrast to the modern Royal Marine Band of the United Kingdom.

Italy's Defense Minister Giulio Andreotti, U. S. Adm. Charles R. Brown, commander-in-chief of Allied Forces Southern Europe, and other military and civilian dignitaries of the six nations, will receive the salutes of the passing units from a grandstand at Monumento a Diaz and witness an aerial flypast and naval review.

On Sunday the band of Headquarters Allied Forces Southern Europe will be at the head of the line of march, and will be followed by the six-nation color guard of the command, which was established in Naples in 1951.

Italy will be represented by four groups from Rome — the Carabinieri Band, the Italian Air Force Band, the Public Security Band, and the Customs Guard Band.

A French Navy Band from Toulon will represent France. Greece will have the Royal Guard Band. In addition to the Mehter Band, Turkey will be represented by the Turkish War Academy Band from Ankara. The Royal Marine Band from Malta will represent the United Kingdom.

The United States will have three bands participating: the 49th Army Band, assigned to the Southern European Task Force in Verona; the band of Headquarters U. S. Air Forces in Europe, coming from Wiesbaden, Germany, and the combined bands of the U. S. Sixth Fleet.

NATO BANDSMEN TUNE UP — Thirteen NATO bands will perform in Naples for the Allied Forces Southern Europe tenth anniversary celebration. Totaling more than 700 musicians, they will parade in downtown Naples next Saturday. On Sunday they will march with military units from the six nations represented in the NATO command. Later, at the Albricci Military Stadium, they give a concert and a massed beating-retreat ceremony. The public is invited to attend the stadium performance free of charge. The four bandsmen shown above represent (l. to r.) Italy, the United States, the United Kingdom and France.

Liquor For Non-Whites Draws Protests In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, June 10 (AP) —Protests from whites began pouring in against the government's draft bill to permit free sale of hard liquor by the bottle to South Africa's huge non-white majority population which was presented in Parliament yesterday.

"The nation gasps at wide concessions," headlined the Johannesburg Rand Daily Mail.

It said even the biggest bottle store operators were "flabbergasted" although they explessed pleasure at the prospect of reaping much new business. But leading churchmen called the plan bad and temperance officials denounced it as "evil."

Saddest were the so-called "shebeen queens" who sell black market white man's liquor illegally to Africans in shebeens or speakeasies of segregated Negro townships at huge profits.

Heretofore only a select few non-whites could buy white man's liquors legally with special permits.

The remainder of the 13 million non-whites were limited to weak beer or what they could bootleg. These restrictions have long been a major grievance of non-whites and also led to huge illicit liquor traffic which police spent much of their time trying to suppress.

Obituaries

John Perona

NEW YORK, June 10 (UPI) — John Perona, owner of El Morocco, the legendary gathering place of the rich, the social, the theatrically-talented, and their press agents, died last night of double pneumonia.

As proprietor of El Morocco, Perona wielded a powerful hand in New York café society. For some people, to be banned from the portals of El Morocco amounted to being ostracized.

Only a few months ago the famous night club was moved from 154 E. 54th St., where it opened in 1932, east to new quarters at 307 E. 54th St.

Archbishop Michael Buchberger

REGENSBURG, Germany, June 10 (AP) — Archbishop Michael Buchberger of Regensburg, senior bishop of Germany, died early today, two adys after his 87th birthday.

Pope Pius XII gave him the personal rank of archbishop in 1950. He had previously been named a papal throne assistant and Roman count.

Mrs Aeneas Gunn

MELBOURNE, Australia, June 10 (AP) — Mrs Aeneas Gunn, 91, one of Australia's best-known authors, died yesterday.

She wrote the children's classics "We of the Never Never" and "The Little Black Princess" about nomadic aboriginals which sold more than 750,000 copies.

Francis G. Maunde-Thompson

LONDON, June 10 (AP) — Maj. Francis George Maunde-Thompson, 84, for many years Britain's oldest air pilot, has died at his suburban home, it was announced today.

Corbett, Jeffries? Not A Chance

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES, June 23 (AP) — It may be just as well that such storied old-time prizefighters as James J. Corbett and Jim Jeffries weren't around in later years.

Most heavyweight champions of the years from Jack Dempsey to Rocky Marciano would have murdered the oldtimers. The same holds true in the lighter divisions.

Such was the unanimous opinion of a group of boxing writers who viewed a prize-fighters collection of old fight movies this other night, some never before shown in public.

DEMPSEY

The film library is owned by Jimmy Jacobs, 31, better known as a five-time national handball champion, and Nick Beck, 28, one-time amateur boxer, sportswriter and journalism teacher at Pasadena City College.

Ardent students of boxing, the two contend that many of the old school — Stanley Ketchell, George Dixon, Terry McGovern, Jeffries, Corbett and others — are highly overrated.

Best Of Day

They concede that they were the best of their day but that they suffer by comparison with later standards and performers.

The exceptions who still look good include Jack Johnson, Joe Gans, Sam Langford, Australian Les Darcy and — the only one still living — Jack Root.

Some of the films are poorly photographed, but where possible they have been reprocessed and fast camera speeds have been reduced. In some instances they have been put into slow motion.

Thomas A. Edison filmed one, said to be the second fight ever shot, on Sept. 7, 1894, at Orange, N. J.

It featured Corbett in a six-round exhibition with one Peter Courtney. "Gentleman Jim" later became an actor, and apparently he didn't take to the stage a bit too soon. A later film, in 1897 at Carson City, shows how Bob Fitzsimmons knocked him out with his famed "solar plexus punch."

"Ruby Robert" reportedly weighed 155 pounds, Corbett 195.

Easy To Hit

Jim Jeffries is shown against Gus Ruhlin at San Francisco in 1901. Jeff shows up big, strong, awkward and easy to hit.

Dempsey's brutal annihilation of Jess Willard — big, strong, awkward and easy to hit — in 1919 lends serious thought as to what he, or Joe Louis or Marciano, would have done to Corbett or Jeffries.

Roughly, the eras compared are the turn of the century; the period from 1918 to 1941, when boxing, its men, its techniques, its glamor were the best ever; and the present day.

Of the current crop — and both from a previous generation — Archie Moore and Sugar Ray Robinson must rate with the all-time great.

In the light heavyweight class, underrated Billy Conn was seen the night he came within a round and one-half of whipping Louis for the heavyweight title.

In shocking contrast was "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien's 20-round affair with crude heavyweight Tommy Burns. O'Brien, in a ring that must have been 25 × 25, not only danced the distance, he literally ran the entire route.

The lethal artistry of Ray Robinson in his victory over rock-jawed Jake La Motta in 1950, or Archie Moore's fantastic comeback and victory in 1958 over Yvon Durelle, puts some of those fabled old time brawls to shame.
