LEND ME YOUR EARS:

4 S. American Countries To Aid On Bolivar Film

SOMETHING FAIRLY COLOSSAL is cooking in the way of an Italian movie. Dino De Laurentiis, the film producer, who arrived back in Rome yesterday on an Alitalia flight from New York, announced that he has been promised the services of 23,000 men and 7,500 horses to reenact battles fought by Simon Bolivar in four South American countries.

The $10,000,000 picture, which is titled "His Name Was Bolivar" and which should outrank De Laurentiis' own "La Tempesta" for sheer size, has of course been in the works for a long time, but this is the first news of cooperation from the four countries — Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela, which the producer visited on his trip abroad.

Peru, De Laurentiis said, promised him 10,000 men and 4,000 horses for the reenactment of the Battle of Ayacucho, as well as help in rebuilding the old city of Lima. Colombia's offer was 4,000 men and 1,000 horses for scenes showing the crossing of the Andes and the Battle of Boyaca. An equal number of men and horses will be used in Ecuador for scenes leading up to Bolivar's triumphal entry into Quito. Venezuela's offer, he said, is 5,000 men and 1,500 horses, plus cooperation in reconstructing old Caracas, which in the film will be destroyed by earthquake.

De Laurentiis is employing many writers—including American author John Byrne—to do the screen version of Chilean writer Enrique Campos Menendez's story.

Rome Traffic To Be Topic Of Lions Club

Rome's traffic situation will be the subject of discussion at the weekly meeting of the Lions Club at the Grand Hotel next Wednesday, March 11, it was announced yesterday. Avv. Cesare Dangelantonio will preside.

The club membership includes some of the best known business, legal, medical, scientific and financial figures of the Eternal City.

As citizens interested in the welfare of their city they are expected to note that the anticipated growth of population (now almost 2,000,000) and numbers of cars on the streets (approximately 343,782) indicate a real crisis not many years away.

Also to be discussed are the frequently mentioned plans for a series of vehicular tunnels to relieve Roman traffic, a scientific system of utilizing the streets already in existence, and the possibility of establishing a traffic authority to handle all the problems.

Sudan Premier Settles Army-Instigated Crisis

KHARTOUM, March 6 (AP) — Sudan's strong man, Premier Ibrahim Abboud, appeared today to have settled his political crisis by bringing dissident Army officers into a reshuffled Supreme Military Council.

After a dramatic two-hour meeting with Army commanders from all over Sudan, Abboud broadcast that the Supreme Military Council had been reshuffled and Brigadiers Abdel Rehim Shanan of the Northern Command and Mohiedding Ahmed Abdallah of the Eastern Command included.

These two men had led their troops into Khartoum on Monday and twice encircled the General Headquarters to force the present Military Council to resign.

Drops 5

In the Council reshuffle Abboud dropped five relatively unimportant lower ranking officers and added three strong men—Shanan and Abdallah and Brigadier Makboul Amin Alhay of Central Command.

Abboud retained the more important figures from the original Council and in general kept the group fairly well balanced between pro-Egyptian and pro-Western elements. So far the cabinet itself is unchanged.

Khartoum and apparently all Sudan remained calm. There were no disturbances, no demonstrations and no bloodshed during the period of tension which began last Monday.

UK Doctors Probe Polio, Parakeet Link

LONDON, March 6 (UPI) — British research workers are probing a possible link between poliomyelitis and the keeping of parakeets as pets.

In an article in the authoritative medical weekly, the Lancet, today Dr. R. G. Sommerville of Ruchill Hospital in Glasgow reported that polio virus was isolated from an ailing parakeet in the home of a boy who died of the disease.

However efforts to infect other parakeets with virus taken from the stricken bird were unsuccessful, Dr. Sommerville said. He added that a suravey of 224 families in which there had been a known case of polio showed that 56 had parakeets as a pet and that in 17 instances the birds died at about the same time as a child in the house contracted polio.

A team of doctors from Belfast said in another article that they had also failed to infect parakeets with polio virus and that they thought it unlikely the birds were important in the spread of the disease. But out of 30 polio victims who kept parakeets as pets three reported the death of one or two birds at about the time of their illness, the team reported.

2 'War Criminals' Escape Cuban Firing Squad

HAVANA, Cuba, March 6 (UPI) —Two of five convicted war criminals sentenced to death at Holguin in Oriente Province fled to safety in the hills yesterday from under the muzzles of a firing squad, according to reports reaching here.

The reports said the firing squad had executed the first three condemned men and was reloading for the remaining two. In a moment of confusion the men ran—and got away. They were not identified.

Twelve men were executed throughout Cuba yesterday, bringing to 396 the unofficial total for executions since Fidel Castro's rebels overthrew the Batista regime Jan. 1.

MILAN, March 6 (UPI) — The Mardi Gras disrobing of Jayne Mansfield had legal repercussions here today — thousands of miles from the party where it happened.
