LEND ME YOUR EARS:

Wart-Hogs Unlimited In Somaliland

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN BAGGING A RHINOCEROS? Or, let us say a klip-springer, a dibitag or a lesser kudu? Your chance has now arrived. Safaris are now available in Somaliland under the auspices of the first Italian "white hunter," Giuliano Belli Dell'Isola.

Costs, which vary according to the number of clients and white hunters, can come to as little as $30 a day, and that includes all equipment except arms, food and the services of native boys, guides and white hunters.

Hunting licenses are obtained on arrival in Somaliland, where the season lasts through the end of March. For complete information, write to Dell'Isola at P.O. Box 304, Mogadiscio, Somaliland.

Your license permits you to kill one elephant, two hippopotami and two lions, but only one giraffe, one leopard and one ostrich. However, six Gerenuk gazelles are allowed and ten crocodiles. As for dik-diks and wart-hogs, they're unlimited.

Happy Birthday...

Today to Alma Herger, director of Rome's USO Club... to Giovanni Cardinal Mercati... and to Capt. Arthur H. Ashton, USN, of the Public Information Division, AF SOUTH, Naples.

Comings & Goings

The many Roman friends of Mrs. John Garzero, wife of TWA's former city sales manager in Rome, will be delighted to learn that she has returned for a brief stay. She is house-guesting—until tomorrow—

Countess Alicia Paoletti... Dr. F. T. Wahlen, who resigned as deputy director-general of FAO and has been elected to the Swiss Federal Council, is due to arrive in Rome today via Swissair.

Robert W. Williams, prominent admiralty lawyer in Baltimore and former member of the U.S. Maritime Commission in the Maryland city, and his bride departed from the Independence at Palermo on Monday to commence an Italian honeymoon.

...sailing on the same American Export liner from Naples yesterday, headed for New York, were Waldemar A. Gallman, outgoing U.S. ambassador to Iraq, and his wife; William F. Kennedy, secretary of International Nickel Co., and his wife; and Richard Cashin of the U.S. Embassy, Tripoli, with family.

Moon Mullins, athletic director of Marquette University, yesterday was Pan Aming his way to Rome, where he will attend both the ordination of his son Larry Mullins Sunday at North American College and the marriage of his daughter Mary. With him are his wife and two other children.

Maestro Fabien Sevitzky, former conductor of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra and now a prominent figure in the international concert and opera scene, left yesterday by Pan Am Clipper for Christmas and winter concerts in the U.S. He'll be back in Italy next spring to conduct at Naples' San Carlo Opera House. In the seasonal spirit of goodwill, maestro Sevitzky tells a little behind-the-scenes story about his concert last week at Milan's Angelicum: On the program was Haydn's rarely performed "L'Isola Disabitata" (Deserted Island) overture but as concert time drew near searches all over Europe failed to disclose a single copy of the orchestral score.

Sevitzky knew that score and parts were available—in the Indianapolis Symphony library 5,000 miles away. He turned to Pan American's public relations office in Rome. Within minutes a cable was on its way to counterparts at Idelwild, asking them to contact the Indianapolis orchestra's librarian and have the people at Idelwild scoop the package off the domestic plane, saw it safely on board the first Clipper for Rome, and the Milan audience heard its Haydn.

...another musical event for this afternoon (at 6) will be the appearance of the Duo Barbelli (violin and piano) in a sonata recital at the British Council, 20 Via Quattro Fontane... E. Reginald Perkins, vice president and chairman of the Rome committee of the American Chamber of Commerce for Italy, has announced that the Christmas luncheon of the chamber will take place Tuesday, Dec. 23, at the Hotel Mediterraneo. The wives of members and guests will be welcome to this affair.

Rome Miscellany

As a special Christmas present for its members, the ACT Theater Club will put on a folklore offering at the Teatro Quirino tomorrow night at 9:15—the "caustic" and "pup" of Sicily. The former are guitar-strumming entertainers who recite stories in song in the piazzas; the "pup" are gigantic, colorfully costumed, puppets.

William McIlquham Schmidt, first secretary at the Danish Embassy, and Mrs. Schmidt have sent out invitations for cocktails this evening at their Viale delle Milizie home... American basso Thomas O'Leary will take part in a recital of chamber songs at the Liceo Romano, Piazza Cola di Rienzo, tomorrow afternoon at 5:30, with maestro Giorgio Favaretto at the piano. Sharing the program with him will be sopranos Morella Muroz and Nicole Géant... grammar school students of Notre Dame International School will stage their annual Christmas play for parents and friends tonight at 8:30 at the school... the Rumanian-born conductor Sergiu Celibidache will lead the virtuosi of the Santa Cecilia Academy Orchestra in this afternoon's symphony concert at the Auditorio. Works of Brahms, Mortari, Strauss and Ravel are on the program.

Paris Opera Officials Jittery About Callas' Show On Friday

PARIS, Dec. 16 (UPI) — Nervous Paris Opera officials were bending over backwards today to avoid a new "Callas scandal" when she sings at a benefit performance here Friday night. The 35-year-old, New York-born Maria Meneghini Callas has either snubbed or been snubbed by opera companies of Chicago, San Francisco, Rome, Milan and New York.

The most recent of the much-publicized upbraids involving the soprano took place last month when Rudolph Bing, general manager of New York City's Metropolitan Opera House, cancelled her contract in a dispute over roles.

"Let us all be grateful," Bing said at the time, "that we have had the benefit of her artistry for two seasons. The Metropolitan is nevertheless also grateful that the association is ended."

Paris Opera officials, however, hope their association with her may just be beginning, and they are taking elaborate measures to see that things are done the way Miss Callas would like it.

A hydrometric engineer will be placed at her disposal in the 84-year-old copper-domed opera house to give her regular bulletins on the humidity content of the air.

Her dressing room has been redecorated and will be double padded as a safeguard against her being troubled by noise.

Opera officials have agreed to give her a full list of the artists, musicians and even technicians who will work during her brief appearance here.

This is the first time such a list has been made available to a performing artist here since the liberation. It is apparently a precaution against the presence among other artists or stage hands of someone with whom Miss Callas has a "feud."

Candles Snuffed Out
Officials have also agreed that the celebrity-studded "candle-light" supper being given in connection with the performance will be held without candles. The candles will be replaced by soft electric light bulbs because, according to one official, "Miss Callas complained candles hurt her eyes."

Just what will be served at the supper is not yet known. But officials said they had submitted the menu to Miss Callas and that she has declared at least most of it to her taste.

Despite all these precautions, and despite the fact that President of the Republic René Coty will be among the guests, the possibility of a new demonstration of the famous Callas temper has been enough of a drawing card to make any one of the house's 2,130 seats unavailable for a month now except at black market prices.

Black Market Prices
Tickets for the Callas performance were selling at the average legal price 35,000 francs ($83) some weeks ago.

Black marketeers are now hawking them for the equivalent of more than $100.

Proceeds from the evening will go to the Legion of Honor Charities. Callas is scheduled to sing arias from several operas rather than one entire opera.

First number on the program is from Bellini's "Norma." Then come arias from Verdi's "La Traviata" and Rossini's "Barber of Seville."

Tosca's Second Act
After that she will sing in costume, the second act of Puccini's "Tosca" along with France's José Lucioni and Italian baritone Tito Gobbi.

Programs, each weighing more than two pounds and including a phonograph record of La Callas, will be sold by a staff of 20 Paris debutantes.

Caviar from the personal stock of the Shah of Iran will be served during supper.

Among the movie stars and celebrities expected to be in the audience are Brigitte Bardot, Martine Carol, Charlie Chaplin, Maurice Chevalier, as well as the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, Aly Khan and others.

Red-Faced Reds Blast Movie Bedroom Scenes

MOSCOW, Dec. 30 (UPI)—The bright young men of the Russian movie world have been admonished by the Soviet authorities to put more communism into their pictures and fewer scenes of the husband in bed with his wife. It's all very well to get away from the boy-meets-girl school of the Stalin era, said Komsomolskaya Pravda in an article bearing the stamp of official approval, but some of the young directors taking over from their elders are going too far. The old type hero of the Soviet movie spent his days and nights with the collective, "he paper conceded. But now things have gone to the other extreme, it complained. "The new type hero is a recluse who confides his thoughts only to his guitar."

"The hero always lives in a depressing cubicle, with a basin to wash in . . . Formerly, the hero was tirelessly cheerful and merry; today he hero and heroine mope pensively throughout the picture. Formerly, he was aloof from all worldly things; now he is shown eating and drinking with gusto. He used to be a stranger to love; now he is invariably shown in bed with his wife, and not just once but several times."

"How did Soviet movies get that way? Asks the organ of the Young Communist League, a watchful guardian of party-line purity in artistic and other affairs in the Soviet Union. Is it that the new generation of Russian movie directors has fallen under the spell of what is known here as the "neo-realism" of Italian films, which have been showing in Moscow and other large Soviet cities? Human Not Enough Not so, said Komsomolskaya Pravda — delving into a person's "intimate life" is something Russian artists don't have to learn from anyone. But the "purely human," it declared, isn't enough unless it is placed within the framework of "a people taking a determined step toward communism."

Blizzards Sweep Austria, Threaten New Avalanches

VIENNA, Dec. 30 (UPI)—Avalanches, blizzards and a threat of more snow disasters are presently sweeping Austria while rescuers are still busy recovering the bodies of last weekend's avalanche victims.

The Austrian avalanche toll is presently at four while one more tourist is still buried under snow on the 11,000-foot high Hochkoenig Mountain in the province of Salzburg. He is also believed to be dead. Rescuers were working since Sunday on the 7,000-foot high Glungezer Mountain near Innsbruck today found the body of Hans Possenig, the last victim of Sunday's Glungezer avalanche disaster. Possenig was buried by a huge snowslide together with three of his Innsbruck comrades. Only one of them was able to free himself from the snow masses while the two others — Franz Grimmer and Robert Madersbacher — were killed.

Another group of three skiers was buried by an avalanche and hurled down a steep precipice on the Hochkoenig Mountain yesterday. Two of them, Franz Aufschneider and Rudolf Ginzinger, were able to free themselves while the third, Josef Wegebauer, is still missing. Rescuers equipped with radio transmitters and accompanied by avalanche dogs started their search shortly after the accident but had to stop last night on account of heavy blizzards. The search will be continued today but there is no hope to find Josef Wegebauer alive.

Eighteen-year-old Dieter Thahammer was the fourth victim of last weekend's avalanche disasters. He was buried by an avalanche on the Brenner Mountain near the Austro-Italian border. All Austrian avalanche rescue teams have been alerted during the past hours in view of weather forecasts that predict more avalanches on account of the thaw and the extraordinary warm weather.
