Oil Supplies Worry Italians, Gov't Pressed For Guarantees

(By United Press International)

A political source said here today that Italy's oil companies are pressing the government for its plans on safeguarding the country's oil needs.

The companies believe that from this moment on a regular supply of Middle East crude oil to Italy is extremely uncertain, was the biggest supplier. Since the Suez crisis, however, Italy lets in Syria and Lebanon.

Between 1954-56 inclusive Iraq oil imports totalled annually about 7,000,000 tons. In 1957, because of Suez, imports dropped to about 3,000,000 tons for the year.

The annual Middle East oil imports average for Italy is about 20,000,000 tons.

U.S. Ships Bolster Marines

Fleet are in the immediate Beirut area where approximately 3,600 marines have landed.

The 50,000-ton Saratoga is commanded by Capt. A. R. Matter of Butte, Mont. The 27,000-ton Wasp is commanded by Capt. H. T. Uiter of Neville, Ohio.

The destroyers in Brown's force were the Bealy, Cromwell, Hartley, Taussig, John Willis, Van Voorhis, Rich, Basile, Damato, R. L. Wilson, W. M. Wood, Steinkamp, Noa, New Lester, and H. J. Ellison.

With Brown were two other admirals, both with titles as commanders of carrier "divisions." They were Rear Adm. G. W. Anderson of Brooklyn, N.Y., aboard the Saratoga and Rear Adm. Edward A. Hannegan of Washington, D.C., aboard the Wasp.

Murphy Arrives

How to deploy this vast force in support of Lebanese President Camille Chamoun's beleaguered government hinged on talks headed by State Department trouble-shooter Robert D. Murphy, who arrived here today aboard the U.S. Air Force's latest jet transport from Washington.

He went into immediate consultation with Chamoun. He was also to see Lebanese Army Chief of Staff Maj. Gen. Fuad Shehab and the American commanders.

Pending their talks and Washington's decisions, Holloway held off landing of the Third Marine Battalion in his special force. This group of about 1,800 fighting men apparently was being held in reserve offshore.

On the rebel side, National Front Leader Saeb Salam warned rebels "would seek aid of all kinds from all free nations of the world" to "repel this aggression with all means at our disposal."

Salam called the arrival of the Marines "open aggression directed against our independence and liberty."

Salam declared his group had decided to use "no single foreign soul or property had been harmed" during 69 days of rebellion and that there was no need to bring in troops to protect foreign lives here.

French Cruiser

Today's big surprise was the arrival of a French cruiser, the 10,300-ton De Grasse, which anchored a mile off Beirut.

Paris reports said it was expected to land a token force of French troops alongside the Marines. Observers here believed such a move would be opposed in Beirut on the grounds that Lebanon still harbors questionable memories of its years as a French mandate.

There were also reports that the 3rd Marine Battalion had been held back from landing because of sensitivities already stirred up by the sight of so many armed Americans in Beirut.

BRITISH CARRIER NEARS
LONDON, July 17 (AP) - The Royal Navy's 43,000-ton aircraft carrier Eagle neared Lebanese waters today while other British ships and fighting men gathered in a big buildup of power in the Eastern Mediterranean.

The Eagle was expected to arrive in the 100-mile stretch of water between Cyprus and the coast of Lebanon sometime tomorrow. The destination of the carrier was not disclosed.

FAISAL HITS WEST

DAMASCUS, July 17 (AP) - Maj. Gen. Gamal Faisal, commander-in-chief of the United Arab Republic's 1st Army, charged the West is "waging a battle of pressure, threats and plots" against the UAR. He called upon the UAR Army and home guard to "stand up to the level of the closing danger."

Faisal, Syria's top soldier, made a radio address just before midnight pledging "a fight to the death in every yard" in the event of aggression on this country.

Tanks Quit Streets In Iraq Capital As Tension Lifts

BAGHDAD, July 17 (AP) - Fifty-tank movements back to their military camps from the Baghdad streets today as the two-day tension ended with burial of Nuri Al Said's body, but some armored cars are still patrolling the city to maintain order.

An Iraqi official reported in a telephone interview with the Middle East News Agency in Cairo that "all is quiet" throughout Iraq.

The agency said it talked to the duty officer at the Iraqi Defense Ministry.

This was the first public telephone conversation to take place between Cairo and Baghdad since last Monday when the Iraqi Army staged its coup and overthrew the monarchy.

Baghdad Radio reported a communique from the Iraqi armed forces command tonight announcing a government decision to form popular resistance squads.

The Radio said the squads "will stand by the army" to strengthen its position in the event of aggression from outside.

The Radio also announced that ex-Foreign Minister, Fadil Jamali, is still alive, and is in prison awaiting trial.

Meanwhile the lives and property of American citizens in Baghdad were reported today to be under the protection of elements of the Iraqi Army which are in control of the new revolutionary regime.

All Americans are alive and well as far as is known, a State Department spokesman said in Washington.

Security Council

said Russia "cannot recognize that the charges of Jordan against the UAR are in any way valid."

Sobolev moved himself that the two questions be discussed concurrently "because the deteriorating situation in the Middle East is so grave that the Security Council must try to save its time and not waste too much time on procedural matters but act on decisions that may contribute to the establishment of peace both in Lebanon and Jordan."

Take-Over Charge
The U.S. charged today that "there is in the Middle East a common purpose to take over everywhere at once, masterminded from one source."

Although U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, making the charge in the Security Council, did not specifically name the United Arab Republic or its support from Russia, he said: "You can read all about it in Cairo."

"We face the brutal fact of assassination by men in plain clothes rather than uniforms," he said. "History will hold us responsible. We cannot condone subversion in plain clothes."

UN May Collapse
"If we do, the UN will break up. This could be a bitter rock which this organization could founder. If the UN does not meet this challenge, it will invite subversion all over the world."

Lodge expressed support of the dispatch to Jordan by Britain of troops which the British told the Council will be withdrawn when the UN can take steps to preserve the country's political independence and integrity.

Soviet delegate Sobolev said his country will demand an immediate emergency session of the UN General Assembly unless the Security Council agrees to order American and British forces out of Lebanon and Jordan at once.

Meanwhile, Sweden submitted a resolution to the Security Council last night for suspension of the work of UN observers in Lebanon.

Such decision, say Prentice-Hall would reflect both the administration's confidence that the business recession is on the way out and administration fear that the return of prosperity will bring a buying spree on the installment plan that will increase inflationary pressures.

Kearns Blueprints Basis For Increased Tourism

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (AP) — How can countries with tourist ambitions attract more visitors from other countries? Henry Kearns, U.S. assistant secretary of commerce, gave these answers today in a speech at the opening session of the World Travel Congress:

Alitalia Backs Surcharge For Jet Traffic

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (AP) — The Italian national airline Alitalia supported yesterday the Italian government's surcharge on Pan American airlines jet passenger fare to Rome.

Pan American put off its Boeing 707 service to Rome — due to start Oct. 27 — because of the demand for an extra fare. It called the surcharge "totally unwarranted because of the speed and capacity of the new aircraft which makes for greater economy."

An Alitalia statement, issued by its Rome headquarters through North American General Manager Fabrizio Serena, denied reports published in New York that the government action was taken to protect Alitalia.

"We feel it necessary to point out that the Italian government's position on this issue was made known to members of the International Air Transport Assn. (IATA) as far back as 1957," the statement said.

"The only occasion Alitalia had to formally set forth its opinion on jet tariffs was at the IATA conference in Cannes, which has just adjourned in deadlock. At this conference our company supported the principle of the jet surcharge," it added.

The statement went on to say other airlines, including American carriers, also joined in the support for the surcharge.

- (1) Develop new facilities for the new jet planes.
- (2) Improve adequate hotel accommodation.
- (3) Eliminate special taxes on travelers.
- (4) Improve local transportation facilities by road, bus and railroad.
- (5) and, for countries wanting English-speaking tourists, train English-speaking guides to serve them.

70 Countries
About 2,000 of the 5,000 members of the travel Agents Association in 70 countries are attending the annual meeting here. The members are not only travel agents but also representatives of transportation companies, government tourist bureaus, hotels and resorts.

They advise and hope to attract the international tourist business which represents two billion dollars a year from Americans alone. The Americans spend another 15 billion dollars on travel within the United States.

Kearns said the U.S. is already trying to attract foreign travelers by speeding up customs and immigration inspections and has dropped the requirement that temporary visitors file an income tax report on leaving.
