DAVID LUBIN MEMORIAL — Ceremony commemorating 110th anniversary of birth of David Lubin was held on June 10 at David Lubin Memorial Library at Food and Agriculture Organization. Lubin, an American citizen, was founder in 1905 of International Institute of Agriculture, which had its headquarters in the Villa Borghese. B. R. Sen, Director General of FAO (right) described Institute as precursor of League of Nations and of the United Nations itself. From left are pictured: Mrs Olivia Rossetti-Agresti, formerly Lubin's secretary; U. S. Ambassador James D. Zellerbach; Mrs Laura Lubin-Saqui, daughter of Lubin; Luigi Ascarelli, Naples businessman, and Ministro Renato Silenzi, chief of protocol of Comune di Roma, who represented the mayor of Rome. Mrs E. Lubin-Silenzi, also daughter of Lubin, was present at ceremony.

'Old Inflexible' Shows He Isn't

BONN, June 12 (AP) — Konrad Adenauer made merry yesterday with the old jibe that he is an inflexible character. In a Bundestag debate, he remarked that in recent months he had announced and revoked his candidacy for the presidency. "That doesn't sound inflexible to me," he said with a grin.

cultural exchange program with France.

This morning's preview brought out a crowd of curious sightseers which swarmed around the entrance to the "Labor Club" where it was held. Inside, the show began in a circular auditorium, with the runway built right across the diameter.

Grey silk drapes formed a background, hiding a picture of Lenin. Across the drapes was the world-famous Dior name, which in Russian is pronounced "Hrisian Dior."

The auditorium was filled with women in printed silk and cotton summer dresses, only a handful wearing hats which are not popular in Russia.

volve muffling an underground atomic or hydrogen explosion to prevent the shock from being fully transmitted through the earth's strata and thereby producing blank or faulty readings on seismographs.

John A. McCone, Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, attended the two and a half hour conference session and told correspondents later he hoped the Soviet Union would enter into a technical study of the underground problems.

He said he was disappointed that the treaty talks had dragged on so long but thought there was a good chance of ultimate agreement.

Their honored guest was West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt, whose city of 2,500,000 persons is the pawn in the Geneva talks. They made it clear to Brandt "they had foremost in their minds their responsibilities the people of Berlin."

After Brandt left Herter's villa, the Western foreign ministers continued a strategy session to assses today's conference stalemate and plan moves for Monday's secret session with Gromyko. Lloyd and Couve later flew home to London and Paris respectively for weekend visits.

Perelman Lives In Spurious Splendor For The Summer

By DOROTHY SANDLER

"I can get lost around the Pantheon as skillfully as any man of my weight and age," said S. J. Perelman the other day, toying languidly with a negroni in the bar of his hotel. Here to complete the writing of a movie for Titanus, the American writer-humorist, who has a very special charm and appeal for special and non-special people, jumped at the chance to write the screenplay. He considers his present set-up "an ideal way to spend the summer indoors in a large Roman hotel . . . I might as well live in spurious splendor." He works hard and long every day in his hotel room—"You meet a much nicer class of people seated by yourself in a lonely room."

However, as he points out proudly, "I do make an occasional passeggiata into the town." On these expeditions, Perelman is accompanied by his poodle, Tartuffe, who emplaned from Idlewild the day before his master, and arrived in Rome a day late, having fought his way out of his cage in Amsterdam. "I didn't fight my way out of my cage," explains Perelman. Before sending the dog off, he popped two Milltowns into his (the dog's) mouth. "He gazed up at me with reproachful, fast-dimming eyes," he recalls. Tartuffe was searched for contraband cigarettes at Ciampino, but emerged guiltless, if weary.

. . . America's writer-humorist

Perelman has discovered that Tartuffe likes the Italians — "their liquid speech soothes him." Three years ago, there was not only the dog, but a cat, a mynah bird and a toucan, all of whom traveled with the family. The cat is now in an exclusive boarding home, the toucan in the Philadelphia zoo, and the mynah bird (who spoke Chinese, Siamese and English) is dead.

Born in Brooklyn on Feb. 1, 1904, Sidney Joseph Perelman went to Brown University where his chief interest was the college comic magazine. He started out as a comic artist and worked for Judge, College Humor and the old Life. He met and worked with the Marx Brothers and stopped drawing in the early '30s. ("It's hard to drive a chariot with two horses . . .") Since that time, he has been writing books, plays, movies and is a frequent contributor to The New Yorker. His first book, "Dawn Ginsbergh's Revenge" (which some nonagenarians remember), was published by Horace Liveright — first with a green plush cover, later with a silver-colored binding. "He must have run out of railroad cars," Perelman says.

In 1929, he married the former Laura West, sister of the late Nathaniel West. They have two children, a son and a daughter. Their daughter, who attends St. John's College in Annapolis, will be joining them here as soon as the Giulio Cesare's sailing from New York permits. Years ago, the Perelmans worked on several films together. The studios considered this a double value system on the assumption that work would be discussed at home. This particular team made

Science for You By Bob Brown

PROBLEM: Make Moebius bands.
NEEDED: Newspaper, paste, scissors.
DO THIS: Make an ordinary band by pasting the ends of paper strips together. Make another band, but this time give the paper strip a half twist before pasting. Make another, with a full twist. Split the bands lengthwise with scissors as shown.
WHAT HAPPENS AND WHY: An ordinary band will be cut into two bands as expected. The band with a half twist does not make two when cut along the center, but makes one band twice as long containing a whole twist. The band with the full twist becomes two bands which are linked together.
These are mathematical tricks. The band with the half twist is an apparent impossibility: an object with only one surface and one edge. The branch of mathematics concerned with Moebius bands is topology.

Italy Ship Strike Hits 11,000 Passengers

between union leaders and ship owners collapsed.

Most of the strikebound ships were in Italy, cluttering ports at Naples and Genoa. But some of the biggest liners — among them the Giulio Cesare, in New York — were in ports abroad.

The biggest Italian luxury liner, the 30,000-ton Cristoforo Colombo, arrived in Genoa yesterday with 800 passengers three days ahead of schedule. The Italia Company, owner of the ship, had ordered the captain to head for Genoa and skip the ports of Gibraltar, Cannes and Naples for fear that the liner might be strikebound in one of them.

Cristoforo Colombo Idled

After the Cristoforo Colombo docked at Genoa, its crew joined in the maritime strike.

A special train was chartered by the Italia Company to take passengers to Naples for which many tickets had been sold.

Meanwhile, crews of three big Italian liners in Genoa were ordered ashore by police after the owners had obtained a court order for the action.

The liners were the 27,000-ton Augustus which was due to sail today for New York; the 20,000-ton Federico C., on the Italy-South America run, and the 13,000-ton Amerigo Vespucci on the run to Central America.

Trieste's Lloyd Triestino company also radioed its liner, the Africa, now enroute from South African ports to the Suez Canal, to head for Genoa.

Police were reinforced on the Genoa piers to guard against demonstrations.

Geneva Talks

in West Berlin can never be accepted.

U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko remained in Geneva to study possible ways out of the diplomatic maze into which the conference has wandered.

French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd returned to their respective capitals for consultations.

Herter reportedly has ordered his planes to be here by the end of the week to take him back to Washington.
