Italy Fears Red Victory In San Marino

SAN MARINO, Sept. 12 (AP) — An Italian government source thinks there is a better than even chance the Communists will regain power in this postage stamp republic's election Sunday. It was an October revolution with a lot of shooting that ousted the Reds and their Socialist allies in 1957 from their only foothold in Western Europe. The Communists have not lost an election in the 38-square-mile country on an Italian hilltop since World War II.

The last election in the summer of 1955 gave the Communist-Socialist alliance a 35-seat majority in the 60-seat San Marino Grand Council.

But two years ago six of the fellow-travelling Socialists defected to the Christian Democrat led anti-Communist minority giving it a new, paper-thin majority.

The Communists tried to sidestep the changed parliamentary line-up by having their Captains Regent dissolve the Grand Council and call new elections, which the Reds were sure they would win.

But the anti-Communists countered by forming a "white government" in an abandoned iron foundry, six miles from San Marino town and just 100 yards from the Italian territory — under the protecting eye of Italy's carabinieri police.

The scales tipped when Italy blockaded San Marino's borders. On Oct. 11 the Communists surrendered.

Nehru emphasized he was not prepared to give in to Communist China's claims for huge areas all along India's Tibetan border.

"This is a claim which is quite impossible for any Indian to discuss, whatever the consequences," the Premier declared.

Loud cheers greeted his statement.

The Premier said Chou En-lai's recent rejection of the entire MacMahon line "basically raises issues which are very serious and which were raised in that form almost for the first time."

He told the House it was not correct there had been any large-scale incursions into Indian territory. He said Communist Chinese troops were now south of the MacMahon line at only one or two isolated places. It was equally incorrect to say Communist Chinese armies were massed along the Indian frontier. "The real danger is not the Army but the words being said in Peiping," he declared.

Cardinal Tedeschini 'Steadily Improves'

The condition of Federico Cardinal Tedeschini, operated on for an intestinal ailment last week, is slowly but steadily improving, doctors said yesterday.

They said that if the improvement continues at the present rate, the 85-year-old Cardinal may be able to leave clinic in about 10 days.

French Congo's Baby Elephant Gift To Ike Flies On Tuesday

PARIS, Sept. 12 (UPI) — A baby elephant for President Eisenhower is to be flown to Washington Tuesday.

Young "Zimbo" was offered as a gift to Eisenhower by Prime Minister Fulbert Youlou of the French Congo when the President visited Paris for talks with Gen. Charles de Gaulle earlier this month.

Reds Fire 2nd Moon Rocket

last stage of the rocket was guided. This has made it possible to correct its course.

"The complex of instruments seems to be working well — that is, all the signals we receive on the rocket's various frequency constantly yield information about properties of inter-planetary space."

By 2100 GMT there had been three Soviet references to a guidance system in operation on the rocket out in space, and one Soviet the sun like the first Soviet cosmic scientist was quoted as saying "the possibility of guiding the last stages or rockets is a new, remarkable step in the technology of space rockets."

Well after midnight, the scientific correspondent of the Soviet news agency Tass, Yevgeny Bogoyavlensky, declared:

"One would be fully justified in supposing that such an outstanding result has been achieved thanks to the Soviet scientific achievements in developing new types of rocket fuel."

The latest Soviet space vehicle, a multi-stage rocket bearing a small pennant with the USSR emblem and the inscription "September, 1959" was expected to reach the moon at 5 minutes past midnight, Moscow time, on Monday, Sept. 14 (10:05 p.m. Sept. 13, Rome time).

Moon Course

The Tass announcement of the launching, broadcast abruptly over Moscow Radio shortly after 3:30 p.m. local time did not say whether the rocket would go into orbit around the moon, actualy strike the lunar surface or pass by on its way further into space.

The Russian text said the rocket was going "k lune," which can be translated either "to" or "towards" the moon.

(What led observers in the West to believe that the Russian were actually trying to land the rocket on the moon itself was an English-language version of the communique broadcast by Tass, which used the word "to" instead of "toward.")

The rocket had reached a speed of 11.2 kilometers (6.8 miles) per second, Tass said.

As usual, the announcement did not name the launching site.

The new rocket's last stage weighs 1,511 kilograms (3,332 pounds) without fuel, which is slightly reavier than the first cosmic rocket, whose lost stage weighed 1,472 kilograms (3,245 pounds).

This was the second rocket shot toward the moon by the Soviets this year. It seemed destined to give Premier Khrushchev considerable additional space-age prestige when he departs for his trip to the U.S. Sept. 15.

There had been considerable speculation in the Western press that the Soviets would attempt a new space effort and possibly a manned flight, either prior to his departure or while he is in the U.S.

The first Soviet cosmic rocket attempt was launched Jan. 2 this year.

Nicknamed "Lunik" it slipped past the moon and apparently went into orbit around the sun to become the first man-made planet.

Like its predecessor, the new instrument container which was ejected from the last stage of the rocket is giving off steady radio signals. A late Tass announcement indicated that the container had already been ejected.

The announcement said the rocket's purpose was "to investigate magnetic fields of the earth and moon, radiation around the earth, the variations and intensity of cosmic radiation, to study heavy neucloi in cosmic space and the gas components of cosmic matter."

The total weight of the instruments, plus the container, was given as 390.2 kilograms (858.44 pounds).

The container is round in shape and has an automatic heat regulator, according to Tass.

The announcement said the transmission set giving off telegraphic-type signals of from .8 to 1.5 seconds, with pauses, was working normally.

Tass said the new rocket could be observed in the Caucasus, in Central European part of the Soviet Union, in Europe, Africa, the Near East, India and Western China.

The radio signals were said to be coming from several transmitters working on 20.003 and 19.997 meter bands.

The "shot at the moon" today beat the cosmic time schedule of U.S. scientists who reportedly were planning to send up a 375 pound satellite to go into orbit around the moon some time in October.

Three U.S. rockets fired towards the moon were failures. But the fourth, a Pioneer IV, was launched March 3 with a multi-stage rocket and began orbiting the sun after passing some 37,000 miles from the moon.

The first Soviet cosmic rocket was fired Jan. 2 and reached the vicinity of the moon on Jan. 4.

It then went into a 15-month orbit around the sun.

The furthest point it was to be from the sun was to be this month, when it would be 123,254,000 miles away. The closest was on Jan. 14, when it was 91,500,000 miles away.

This rocket was apparently of a different variety from the one shot up the first of the year.

De Gaulle Set To Tell Algeria Plan

ALGIERS, Sept. 15 (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle's expected Algerian policy announcement will find the French Army engaged in combat virtually all over the North African territory.

Despite recent military successes, particularly in western Algeria and in the Kabylie mountains east of Algiers, a French military victory in Algeria still appears far away.

Reduced

Government economy measures and the callup of draftees born in the early years of World War II — hence less numerous — have reduced the French Army in Algeria by twenty per cent, down to some 400,000 men.

According to French Army sources, the purely military phase of the Algerian war has virtually ended in large areas of western Algeria (the Oran region) where thorough implantation of French troops has prevented the rebels from reorganizing their guerilla and underground apparatus.

In the tough Kabylie ranges fifty miles east of Algiers, Gen. Maurice Challe and all of his available reserves continue "Operation Binoculars" aimed at smashing the dreaded rebel Willaya (zone) No. 3.

CLAIMS

ALGIERS, Sept. 15 (AP) — French forces have killed or captured 2,355 Algerian rebels in the Kabylie region, a rebel stronghold east of Algiers, since launching a main attack in the area, July 22, French Army headquarters says.

A headquarters communique yesterday added that 740 rebels had been put out of action throughout Algeria during the week ending September 13 — 297 in "Operation Binoculars."

French losses were said to be 30 killed.

Jay Gould's Son Dies In New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 15 (AP) — Howard Gould, 88, last surviving son of the 19th century railroad financier Jay Gould, died Sunday in Doctors Hospital.

Gould had worked in his father's railroad enterprises and held one of the oldest seats on the New York Stock Exchange. He was internationally known as a yachtsman, and early day auto racer.

Gould is survived by a daughter and a sister.

Israeli 'Aggression' Protested By UAR

CAIRO, Sept. 15 (UPI) — The United Arab Republic protested to the UN Mixed Armistice Commission today against "flagrant aggression" by four Israeli jet fighters on a UAR plane on Sunday.

The UAR will also inform the UN General Assembly about an alleged incident in the Aqaba international air corridor involving "previous aggressions" by Israel, it was announced.

This Cop Provided His Own Clues

PARIS, Sept. 15 (AP) — Last June Ernest T., a gendarme, was highly praised by the chief of the city police for "his extraordinary flair for finding stolen cars."

Today he is in jail.

He confessed to his superiors that if he found the cars so easily, it was because he stole them himself.

'Hit Trapped Truck Driver To Ease Death'

BARDNEY, England, Sept. 15 (AP)—A deeply distressed man told a coroner yesterday that he had knocked a dying man unconscious to put an end to his suffering in the burning wreck of a truck.

The dead man, 21-year-old John Fox, driver of the truck, had pleaded that the blow be struck. Flames were searing the lower part of his body.

Tried In Vain

William Marsland, who had tried vainly to pull Fox from the vehicle, said sadly that he reflected a fleeting moment and hit Fox with his fist as hard as he could.

"The truck burst into flames after a collision, and I and a friend tried desperately to pull the driver out of his cab," Marsland told Coroner John Goodlad.

"We pulled off a door, but it was hopeless. The fire was furious and Fox was tightly trapped.

'I've Had It'

"The poor chap said 'I've had it,' and asked me to strike him. We decided to make him unconscious. I hit him at the back of the neck."

Fox burned to death and firemen had to cut away parts of the cab to extracate his body.

"It was all done with the very best intentions, I am sure," said Coroner Goodlad. "But it was a dangerous thing for a lay person to do, and I would warn the public not to take such grave risks."

The coroner recorded a verdict of accidental death.

'Watchmaker' Takes Off

TOKYO, Sept. 15 (AP) — The "Flying Watchmaker," from San Francisco, Peter Gluckmann, took off today for Honolulu via Wake Island. Gluckmann, 32, who is trying for a new round-the-world speed record in a single-engine plane, took off two times previously but returned after engine trouble,

SRO Sign Up For Callas Spanish Concert

BILBAO, Spain, Sept. 15 (AP) — Italian soprano Maria Callas is to sing here Thursday and the "Standing Room Only" signs were out today 48 hours before the performance.

A spokesman for the Bilbao Association of Friends of the Opera said confirmation of the engagement had been received from the singer's impresario yesterday and she is to arrive here by plane tomorrow afternoon.

The spokesman said he did not know if Miss Callas will fly to Bilbao in the private plane of Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis or in a chartered plane.

Miss Callas' name has been coupled with that of Onassis since the breakup of her marriage with Italian businessman Giovan Battista Meneghini. She is reported to be with Onassis aboard his yacht Christina in Greek waters.

She will be accompanied by the Barcelona Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Nicolas Resciano in her concert at the Coliseo de Albia here. The concert closes Bilbao's summer operatic festival.
